

About Deb Kloeppe

Deb Kloeppe is the founder and president of the Military Spouse Corporate Career Network (MSCCN), a unique non-profit and nationwide military-affiliated job applicant referral agency. The company uses online and offline products to connect employers in all industries with men and women who have a military affiliation. MSCCN offers screening services, job postings, and resume search subscriptions, advertising in online and print media, and participation in workshops and career fairs. Deb founded the company in 2004.

Deb is a writer, entrepreneur, keynote speaker, savvy business woman, nurse, military family activist, and military spouse. She writes and speaks about career passion, military family strength, patriotism, what employers want, and military job seekers' struggles in the corporate workforce. As an innovator in military spouse, war wounded, and their caregivers' job referral services, Deb has remained a strong advocate for the military-affiliated job seeker's need for vocational training and extended support.

Prior to MSCCN, Deb built her executive corporate career within American Airlines and Concentra Health Company as Senior Vice President, Operations. Deb also founded and maintained a graphics art and sporting goods retail store for thirteen years, in southern Illinois.

Deb's awards include the Department of Navy's Meritorious Public Service Award, ESGR 5 Star Plaque for Support of the Reserve and Guard, the HOMEFRONT Diversity Award for Diverse Employment Support and the first Office of Global Maritime Situational Awareness Coin. Deb was also selected as a Who's Who of Military Spouses in 2007.

Deb and her husband, Rear Admiral Dan Kloeppe, USN (ret) remain active supporters of the military community through numerous organizations and charitable contributions.
