USAA Supports New Military Spouse Hiring Network

St. Louis - March 10, 2014

USAA, a leading financial services provider for military members and their families, has joined forces with two military employment assistance groups to create a job placement service for military spouses as they make the transition to post-service life.

The new MilFamily Jobs Network, a creation of Corporate American Supports You (CASY) and the Military Spouse Corporate Career Network (MSCCN), will assist military-affiliated job seekers from resume creation to job placement, and will offer virtual employment training and assessment seminars. USAA and other employers benefit from greater access to military spouses seeking employment and talent-matched candidates for their open positions.

According to Stacy Bayton, a Marine Corps veteran, spouse, and CASY-MSCCN chief operating officer, the new network will help address two of the biggest challenges facing military spouses looking for employment: recruiters and human resource professionals who don't fully understand the unique skill sets associated with the military, and translating spouses' experience into resumes in a way recruiters will value.

"USAA is a long-standing supporter of veteran and military communities," said Bayton, "and we are proud to support their continued efforts through the MilFamily Jobs Network, which focuses on the vital resources needed for military employment opportunities."

"We're always looking for innovative ways to help members and spouses successfully transition to the private sector," said Dana Simmons, USAA executive vice president for Human Resources and retired Air Force brigadier general. “We believe CASY-MSCCN brings a unique level of expertise to our efforts to help these individuals achieve their full potential.”
